These comfy window seats serve another purpose in this living area - they provide additional storage. Underneath the cushions, lids flip up to conceal ample storage for beach towels and picnic hampers. The Shaker style paneling on the front and sides of the seats coordinates with a built-in on the facing wall. To add a coastal touch, we recommended beadboard paneling and the homeowner selected a coral print fabric for the upholstery. To read more about this project, click the italicized text.

Mahogany is a beautiful wood that is widely used both indoors and out here in South Florida as it is rot and insect resistant. We are pleased to partner with Carribbean Teak Lumber Supply to provide our clients with high quality, sustainably harvested mahogany.

Hygge in South Florida? If you've been following interior trends you know that hygge is big - with 20 books published on the Scandanvian lifestyle just last year. But if you're wondering how you can hygge when the weather is always above a balmy 70 degrees here in South Florida, you are not alone. Check out our "hot hygge" tips on the Kodama blog to bring a touch of hygge to SFL.
